Making a great support contract perfect

Hewlett Packard Enterprise offers a flexible purchase program that helps you easily plan and budget training for your organization—so that the right training is provided to the right people at the right time. The only decision you need to make is how much training your workforce will need in the coming year. Based on your situation and our experience with hundreds of organizations that have similar needs, Hewlett Packard Enterprise can help you estimate the amount of training required.

The HPE Contractual Training Credit is a flexible, economical, and simple way to purchase training with your HPE support contract. This option is a currency-based account that can be drawn from throughout the year to register for any of our comprehensive education services, ranging from technical training for Hewlett Packard Enterprise and industry-standard technologies to training for IT Service Management, project management, and business analysis.

While support contracts provide a safety net with proactive and reactive means to maximize uptime of IT environments, they don't address the root causes of unplanned downtime and failed IT projects. Training does. Education services from Hewlett Packard Enterprise help you drive better business results through a comprehensive portfolio of learning solutions that can help you reduce IT costs, control the risks to business operations, and drive faster growth.
